

Echocardiography Lecture and Case Presentations

Presented by

The Heart & Vascular Hospital at Hackensack University Medical Center

Tuesday, November 20, 2012 6:30PM-8:30PM

Hekemian Auditorium, Hackensack University Medical Center
30 Prospect Avenue, Hackensack, NJ 07601

Strain and Strain Rate: How Clinically Useful Is It?

Muhamed Saric, MD

Director of Operations, Noninvasive Cardiology
Associate Professor of Medicine
NYU Langone Medical Center
Director, Echocardiography
Tisch Hospital, NYU Langone Medical Center
New York, New York

Echocardiographic Case Review

Sharon Maza, MD

Division of Cardiology, Department of Medicine
Hackensack University Medical Center

Robert Tozzi, MD

Chief, Division of Pediatric Cardiology,
Department of Pediatrics
Hackensack University Medical Center

Purpose:

This program is designed to provide cardiologists, internists, radiologists, and other healthcare professionals with a review of striking or unusual cases in echocardiography and how proper analyses of these cases can result in better treatment and outcomes for patients.

Objectives:

At the conclusion of this learning activity, the participants will be able to:

- Describe the process by which global and regional strain and strain rate are determined
- Identify cardiac conditions in which measuring strain and strain rate might be advantageous
- Describe the potential utility of measuring left ventricular torsion and twist
- Identify important echo functions of hypertrophic cardiomyopathy on adults and children

Credit:

Hackensack University Medical Center is accredited by the Medical Society of New Jersey to sponsor continuing medical education for physicians.

Hackensack University Medical Center designates this educational activity for 2 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

This program includes a light dinner. Registration is complimentary. To register, please call Cheryl Williams at (551) 996-4367 or email cherylwilliams@hackensackumc.org.